

Will making and gifts in Wills

If you are planning to make or change your Will, Graeae strongly suggests you use a solicitor or qualified Will writer. If you do not have an adviser, ask a friend or relative for a recommendation, or visit the website of the Law Society at www.lawsociety.org.uk

If you already have a Will and would like to add a gift to Graeae, you can use a codicil. There are some suggested wordings for these on the Graeae website.

Several types of gift can be left in a Will, including:

- A residuary gift, which is a share or percentage of what is left of your estate once your debts have been paid.
- A pecuniary gift, which is a set amount of money, usually linked to the retail price index.
- A specific gift, such as an item of jewellery or a painting.

Graeae recognises that you will wish to provide for your loved ones first, but after that and if there is scope to do so, please remember the work of this important charity.

Why support Graeae?

We are a unique, disabled led theatre company, which breaks down physical and attitudinal barriers to promote the inclusion of D/deaf and disabled artists now and for the future.

Our vision is of a world where all D/deaf and disabled people have a diverse range of training and employment opportunities to reach their full creative potential and their right to be excellent.

By remembering us in your Will, you will create these opportunities, have an influence and impact on the UK theatre industry and ensure equality takes centre-stage.

“A company of disabled artists that is constantly pushing against expectations and at theatrical boundaries”

What difference can a gift in your Will make?

Graeae fundraises tirelessly, fuelled by our passion for inclusion. The hardest projects to fundraise for include an investment training programme for young D/deaf and disabled adults. Your legacy would help guarantee these important schemes a future.

‘Until we see equality for D/deaf and disabled people, we will not stop; in the meantime, every penny we receive will ensure the talent of our glorious bunch of artists and young people shines through. Thank you for your support.’

Jenny Sealey MBE, Artistic Director/CEO

“...the work has always been boundary pushing and innovative in its creativity.”
